素問 Sù Wèn Vocabulary

Most Frequent Characters

In this section characters are introduced in order of their frequency of occurrence.

Identify the character and find its definition(s).
Fill in as many definitions as you can find and fit.
Make this section your general reference dictionary, in contrast to the third section which will be more specific to classical definitions and the Nei Jing in particular.

In this section fill in the pinyin (and tone mark) in the column labeled Pinyin.
Then write the character across the row. Always say the word as you write it.
If there is no simplified character, reduce the size of your writing for the final three.
If there is a simplified character, it is the same size as the traditional character.
Learn to recognize the character in both traditional and simplified forms.

Notes

WL: = WenLin

C: = chapter # in SuWen

- 7 pinyin syllables are represented by two characters that are used interchangeably.

See T #      Workbook #

huá/510	559
jù/679	469
qiào/1028	751
què/1074	845
shù/1225	697
yú/1644	760
zhòu/1813	732

also chì/154 & chì/153 are virtually the same character and have the same meaning. (see workbook #637)

- Many characters can be pronounced more than one way.

apa = also pronounced as: followed by the alternate pronunciation(s) and definitions

There are a few characters for which I think other pronunciations are significant enough to include both in the first two sections:

#20 shǎo & shào	(T:1142)
#28 zhōng & zhòng	(T:1798)
#39 cáng & zàng	(T:105)
#57 xíng & háng	(T:1470)
#151 cháng & zhǎng	(T:117)
also #468 jiāng & jiàng	(T:602)
#706 chā, chà & chāi	(T:111)
#935 qī & jī	(T:1004)

a couple more which are difficult to find in most dictionaries and might be confused with their phonetic:

#642 huāng vs. máng (T:522)

#698 shuàn vs. chuān (T:1229)

bold = Tessenow's pronunciation/spelling

- comb: = combination/compound: one or two common combinations and their specific meaning.
(Tessenow lists many more in some cases)

- No Definitions = Tessenow offers no definitions for the character.
I have provided them in most instances.

This Vocabulary Workbook is comprised of Three Sections:

Section I

presents the characters in order of frequency of occurrence

Section II

is a writing/calligraphy practice section that includes both traditional and simplified characters

These two sections divide the vocabulary into groups of 100 characters each

In Section III

the vocabulary is presented alphabetically by pinyin
