What is Shiatsu ?
(pronounced she-aht-soo)

Asian cultures have long been devoted to the art of massage. Bodywork has especially flourished in Japan. Japanese massage includes two prominent styles, Shiatsu and Anma or Amma. Shiatsu means “to press” with the finger(s). Anma derives from the Chinese word an-mo which means “to rub”, and in both China and Japan it is the equivalent of the English word massage. Its deeper meaning, however, is to calm with the hands, or to make peaceful by touching. I like to translate it as “tranquility through touch.”

Shiatsu is both a general style of bodywork and a specific massage technique. As a style of bodywork it utilizes many techniques, including Anma, and is designed to rejuvenate the body and relax the mind.

Shiatsu, at an advanced level, in conjunction with a traditional diagnosis, may complement or substitute for an acupuncture treatment.

In this sense it is often referred to as Acu-pressure, or Asian Bodywork Therapy (ABT).

Shiatsu and Chinese Medicine

Chinese medical philosophy is the quintessential root of holistic medical thinking. It addresses health and disease in the fullest sense, seeking to harmonize the body, mind and spirit internally, and to achieve a balance between the individual and his/her environment externally. Chinese medicine recognizes massage as an important component of a healthy lifestyle, as well as a significant healing modality. Because, as they say, ‘an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure,’ the health maintenance and disease prevention aspects of Shiatsu can be profound. Here at OSM, and especially in the short form series of classes we emphasize this; the wellness aspect of the work. For this reason we refer to our work as a shiatsu session rather than a shiatsu treatment.

About the Shiatsu Program

In the full program students will learn several Shiatsu sequences, a significant amount of Oriental medical theory, and a number of valuable personal care practices such as Dao-Yin (Do-In), Qi-Gong (Ch'i Kung) and Tai-Ji Quan (T'ai Chi Ch'uan).

Shiatsu is learned and practiced much like a martial art, a ballet, or piece of music. The 'form or kata' is like a musical score or a piece choreography. The form means both the sequence or flow of the massage, and the proper way of doing it. Done correctly the kata generates a flow of qi within both the recipient and the practitioner. Because of the emphasis on form, this style of shiatsu may be called Kata Shiatsu. Through mindful practice of the kata/form, shiatsu becomes an art form.

Advantages of Shiatsu

Shiatsu offers several significant advantages:

- No oils, lotions or lubricants are used.
- There is no need to remove clothing; clients feel safe.
Because of this modesty and sexual issues rarely occur.
- Because the client is clothed they stay warmer.
- Shiatsu is versatile. It can be practiced anywhere: on the floor, a massage table, or while seated.
- Learning shiatsu broadens a practitioner's repertoire and enhances his/her marketability.
- Collaboration with practitioners of Chinese medicine is greatly facilitated because you understand their language and approach.
- Shiatsu is relaxing and enjoyable to give as well as to receive.
- The effects of shiatsu are many faceted.

Clients appreciate its depth, without being painful.

They enjoy the profound sense of relaxation, while also feeling alert, refreshed, and invigorated.

Chinese Terms and Concepts

道

Dào (pronounced dow) = a road, path, pathway; way; to show the way; to follow a path
(Tao⁴)

The way the universe Is,
that it is one whole and many parts
It is the Way of Nature, and the natural way.

The Dao is the subject of one of the world's great books, titled the Dao De Jing (Tao Te Ching). It is also known, as were many ancient texts, by the name of its author, Lao Zi (Lao Tzu). Chinese philosophy has a definite influence on Chinese medicine, but there is no requirement that one believe anything in particular. What may be important is that one be able to suspend one's disbelief and be open to the explanations that come down to us through this rich and vital tradition. Like studying a foreign language, its not weird, its just different. In many ways medicine is like a foreign language, and as one might expect, anatomy, among other things, will be conceived of and described differently in the East.

The two most important concepts to introduce are: Qi and Jing

氣

Qì (pronounced chee) = vital energy Qi permeates the universe, its nature is to flow.
(Ch'i⁴)

When the qi is flowing properly within us,
we call it Health.

The general purpose of Shiatsu is to facilitate the flow of qi in the body.
Shiatsu done properly fosters the flow of qi in both the client and the practitioner.
Practiced in this way, shiatsu is like yoga.

經

Jīng = channels (meridians) are like rivers or energy currents within the body.
(Ching¹)

Qi circulates within them. They circulate Qi.
There are channels everywhere in the body, like a watershed or capillaries surrounding every cell. There are 14 primary ones with points. Eleven are connected to and named for organs (though they are slightly different than what westerners mean by them) a twelfth channel is called:

Sān Jiāo = translated as three burners, triple burner/warmer/heater, or triple energizer connects the three cavities of the body and the organs within them (thoracic, abdominal, pelvic). These are referred to as the upper, middle and lower burner respectively.

There are also three Dān Tián (upper, middle and lower). These are energetic centers of the body. These are located in the lower abdomen, the chest (heart) and the head (third eye). The lower dan tian is considered to be the root or foundation of the body's qi. It is the focus point for centering ourselves, and the center we try to work from when doing Shiatsu. We will consistently talk about focusing your mind and your breath in your lower dan tian.

Main Points Contraindicated During Pregnancy

These points are all bilateral

Point	General Location	Specific Location
GB-21	top of the shoulder	crest of the trapezius, midway between the spine and the shoulder/acromion or more specifically: midway between C7 and the acromial end of the clavicle
LI-4	hand	on the dorsum of the hand, the entire fleshy area between, the 1st and 2nd metacarpals or more specifically: the midpoint of the 2nd metacarpal, radial side just off/along the palmar edge of the bone
Sp-6	medial lower leg	on the medial aspect of the lower leg, ~ one hand width proximal to the prominence of the medial malleolus, and posterior to the tibia
BL-60	outer ankle	posterior to the lateral malleolus, in the large depression between the prominence of the malleolus and the achilles tendon

These points are specifically contraindicated for acupuncture, but because, especially the first three, are frequently sensitive and are therefore often massaged rather vigorously, it is prudent to exercise caution when working on women known to be, or trying to get pregnant.

Women with a history of miscarriage would be particularly at risk, though in general shiatsu should be good for them.

 Expect these points to be considered contraindicated during pregnancy on board exams.

As a side note, regular shiatsu has been known to increase fertility, so be diligent if you do not wish to become pregnant at this time.*

*Let me preface this by saying that one does not learn shiatsu or any massage from a book.

About this Style of Shiatsu

About Jim Cleaver

Jim Cleaver, the developer of the Shiatsu program, has been teaching at the Oregon School of Massage since he moved to Oregon in 1990. He is also the co-founder of the classical Chinese Medicine degree program at the National College of Natural Medicine. He is a licensed acupuncturist and author of many books for students of Chinese medicine. He teaches all aspects of Chinese medicine, including Tai Ji Quan and Qi Gong practices, which he considers integral to the effective practice of both acupuncture and shiatsu.

Jim previously taught shiatsu at the Boulder School/College of Massage in Colorado, the Amma Institute in San Francisco, and Twin Lakes College of the Healing Arts in Santa Cruz. He has also taught at other schools of Chinese medicine such as Five Branches Institute in Santa Cruz and the Oregon College of Oriental Medicine in Portland. While at the Amma Institute he helped create the concept and kata for ‘On Site chair massage’ with his friend and colleague David Palmer.

Jim has trained hundreds of students since he began teaching in 1978, and treated thousands of clients since he began his study of shiatsu in 1974 with Richard Hyatt in California. Richard was the primary student of Shizuko Yamamoto, one of the original teachers of shiatsu in this country. As I recall she learned from her father or uncle. Her style became known as Barefoot Shiatsu, after the title of her book, which was first published in 1979.

More About Our Style

I often call this style ‘Kata Shiatsu’ because of the emphasis on the fundamentals of the form/kata. The form trains the student in both the sequence and the individual techniques of the massage, i.e. its wholeness. In this sense, it is the kata that is truly the teacher.

In this tradition, 1,000 massages were to be performed during one’s apprenticeship, and before one could be considered sufficiently well trained to merit charging for one’s services. This induces a profound humility, and reflects a deep understanding of the time required to master even the basic level of skills necessary to become a professional body-worker. The kata fosters a sensitivity in the hands of the practitioner for which there is no shortcut. It cultivates the mind and body of the student in ways that cannot be completely described or accounted for. It effects a transformation of the person. Thus kata conveys for us a sense of integrity in the work, and the tradition that can only be arrived at through practice. For all the above reasons, plus the sense of shiatsu as a meditative and even spiritual practice, I sometimes refer to this style as ‘Dao Shiatsu’, i.e. the ‘Way or Path of Shiatsu’. I use ‘Kata’ during the training phase, and ‘Dao’ for the professional phase.
